WASHINGTON TAKES FINAL STRIKE STAND

FIND LOCAL MAN DEAD IN CAR ON LONELY STREET

M. H. VANDENBROOK FOUND VICTIM OF HEART TROUBLE THIS MORNING AFTER LONG SEARCH

Matt H. Vandenbrook, 526 Fourth street south, chief mechanic at the Jensen and Anderson garage, was found dead in his Ford coupe on Seventeenth avenue north shortly before 7 a. m. today after searching parties had scoured the city in a vain hunt for him through half the night. Dr. F. X. Pomainville was immediately summoned, and pronounced death the result of heart trouble.

Mr. Vandenbrook left home at about 9 o'clock last night, presumably for the Jensen and Anderson garage. Although he had left word that he would be back in a short time, Mrs. Vandenbrook did not take alarm at his failure to return at an early hour, and retired, thinking that he must have been detained down town and would be back in time. Awaking at about 2 a. m. and finding her husband still missing, she immediately notified the garage and the police department, and searching parties were organized.

Search All Night

Although members of the firm and employes of the Jensen and Anderson Co., and members of the police force, kept up the hunt throughout the night, no trace of the missing man was found until this morning when residents of Seventeenth avenue noticed the car standing at the curb with the dead body huddled together on the seat and notified the authorities. District Attorney F. W. Calkins was immediately called to the scene, but in view of the fact that the death was very obviously a natural one, no official investigation is planned.

Mr. Vandenbrook's presence in the out of the way section of the city at the time of his death was explained today by members of the firm by which he was employed, who said that in all probability he was driving about the city at the time in an effort to locate some minor trouble in the motor of his car.

Death Took Place Early

Physicians who examined the body reported that death had occurred a considerable time before the discovery, probably before mid-night. Residents of Seventeenth avenue reported having seen the lights of a car at the place where the Vandenbrook coupe was found at about 10 o'clock last night, and it is thought likely that the death occurred at about that time.

Mr. Vandenbrook had apparently felt the illness coming upon him, for he had pulled the car up to the curb and shut off the motor. It is thought

Road Contractor Liable For Damage To Highways

Madison, Wis., July 12—When a road contractor in constructing highways damages other roads in the process, he can be held personally liable for the damage, the attorney general's department held today. Even though he was building a state highway, the state cannot be held legally responsible, the opinion said.

"That a contractor is personally liable for damage done, there is probably no doubt," the attorney general said. "It may be, too, that he and his agents and employes concerned in the injury of the roads are personally liable to prosecution and punishment and to pay the whole cost of restoring the roads to their former condition."

Inquiry was made to the attorney general by the highway commission after towns had complained that certain contractors had cut up their roads by driving heavy gravel trucks over them.

Farmers of the district who lost all of their belongings in the storm are doing their best to rebuild the storm stricken district, the treasurer reports. MORGAN ATTACKS SPECIAL SESSION

NOTHING CONSTRUCTIVE ACCOMPLISHED, ATTORNEY GENERAL SAYS IN ATTACK ON GOVERNOR TODAY

Superior, Wis., July 12—The proposed repeal of the secrecy clause to the income tax law for which Gov. J. J. Blaine called a special session of the legislature in March of this year, was characterized today by William J. Morgan, attorney general and candidate for governor, as "a case of much talk little merit behind the suggestion."

"Two members of the tax commission aver that a repeal of the secrecy clause would do no good whatever in assisting the state in collecting taxes on incomes to which it is lawfully entitled, and that the proposition is one that contains much mischief," Attorney General Morgan told his audience.

No Need For Call

"The special session of the legislature was indefensible," Mr. Morgan continued. "Not one thing was accomplished that could not be completed either at the regular session or at the next regular session of the legislature. The time during which the tax commission could go back over income returns was extended from three to six years but that could be done at the next session.

"One constructive law was passed that would have been helpful immediately and that was to make the income tax returns accessible to the attorney general and to district attorneys that would have assisted these officers in prosecuting combinations in restraint of trade. But that passed at the special session was vetoed by the governor.

No Prosecutions

"The chief executive of the state, whose constitutional duty it is to see that the laws the faithfully executed, has repeatedly charged that tax dodgers have defrauded the state of large sums in incomes taxes, "Mr. Morgan said. "If that be so," he asked "why no prosecutions?

"The attorney general has no authority to bring actions to recover taxes fraudulently withheld, except when requested or directed by the governor. If the governor goes not desire to cooperate with the attorney general to vindicate the law which he claims has been violated then he has 71 district attorneys, whose duty it would be to institute appropriate actions on them the direction of the governor.

Henker Man Killed When Ford Car Upsets In Ditch

Louis Rauch of Pierce, Minn., for the past two years employed as a farm hand by J. A. Altmann of Blenker, was instantly killed Monday evening when a Ford car in which he was returning from a dance at Sherry Hills ran into a ditch and turned over. As Rauch was alone at the time, the cause of the accident will probably never be known.

Other people returning from the dance noticed the overturned car, and investigating, found Rauch's body, severely cut and lacerated, pinned underneath. He was removed to a nearby saloon, owned by his employer, where an inquest was held.

The car, except for a broken axle and windshield, was in perfect running order after the accident.

EDUCATORS FAVOR GOVERNMENT HELP

SUPT. E. G. DOUDNA TELLS OF SENTIMENT AT NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION CONVENTION FOR DEMOCRACY OF EDUCATION

Democracy in education was the keynote of the National Educational Association Convention held in Boston according to City Supt. of Schools E. G. Doudna who has just returned from the convention. The problem which the 10,000 educators who were present at the big convention were most interested in was uniformity of education in all the states of the union and equality of opportunity for education to all people in the states, Mr. Doudna states.

Favor Educator in Cabinet

The general sentiment of the convention was for a representative for education in the president's cabinet and an appropriation for all states of the union from the Federal government, Mr. Doudna said. The most feasible plan is to prepare appropriations much the same as federal aid roads are maintained and leave the expenditures up to the states individually the government allowing each state in proportion to the state budgets for education. They opposed federal interference with the states in their education methods other than to insist that uniformity of educational methods be adopted by all states.

Shows Need in South

Mr. Doudna pointed out that there is a great need for federal educational aid in the south, where southern states are now expending large sums for education. Especially in Louisiana, it was shown at the convention that 25 per cent of the adult populace are illiterates and federal aid is needed there if any where.

Much good will come of the work of the convention for democracy in education, Mr. Doudna predicted.

Take Steps To Prevent Sale Of Liquor At Camps

Madison, Wis.—Rigid enforcement of the prohibition laws by officers and enlisted men during the encampments of the Wisconsin national guard is ordered by Adjutant General Orlando Holway in his instructions sent to guard units today.

"The field camps now approaching in which some 7,000 young Wisconsin men will be assembled are bound to attract the peddling bootlegger, irresponsible, without care for the vile rawness of his poisonous product, eager only for his own profit," Adjutant General Holway said. "The guard, assembled as such, may not with honor disobey or desregard the law nor afford the spectacle of soldiers crazed and inflamed by poisonous drink.

"To lessen and if possible, to avoid any such unhappy contingency," the adjutant general added, "no intoxicating liquor will be brought to camp, except such as is provided by the state surgeon for medicinal use in the camp hospital. Officers in command of organizations are especially charged to this end with thorough inspection before entrainment for camp, and all officers, whether or not in charge of units, will themselves be governed by the same rule.

Seek Organization Of "Safe Drivers" Clubs Thru State

Milwaukee, Wis.—Organization of Safe Drivers clubs throughout Wisconsin is hoped for during the next year, according to Charles M. Williamson, head of the Safety division, Milwaukee Association of Commerce.

The Safe Drivers Club of Milwaukee has completed a membership campaign and now has enrolled throughout the county 10,281 drivers, who are in favor of "sane driving."

During the past year the club has worked hard in putting into effect a number of traffic regulations which will decrease accidents, the outstanding of which is the Arterial highway system, which compels al ldrivers to come to a dead stop before turning on a boulevard or main street. Through cooperation of the suburbs the system has been extended beyond the city limits ,and it is possible for cars to come in from the outskirts of South Milwaukee to the heart of the city on a clear street.

Among other things the club has aided in the establishment of danger signs at sharp curves and has made an effort to have all shrubbery removed near dangerous turns.

The club works with the State Highway commission for the advancement of safe driving and has helped to reduce the number of deaths caused by automobiles during the past year.

Secure Elks' Hall For Rural Carriers Meeting

The local boy scouts have volunteered their cooperation in handling the convention, and will serve as guards and messengers.

Labor Board Chairman Ben Hooper Disappointed In Executives' Attitude.

(By Associated Press)

Washington, July 12—That President Harding's proclamation directing all persons to refrain from all interferences with lawful efforts to maintain interstate commerce and carrying of the United States mails stood today as the government's last word in the railway shop men's strike. Indications were from other quarters that should the proclamation be not heeded strong action was contemplated.

Mails Must Move

The presidential proclamation issued late last night after the president and his cabinet had spent the day studying the question, was generally interpreted today as a warning to both the striking shop men and railroads that mails must move and interstate commerce be maintained.

The interpretation had as its basis the proclamation of somewhat similar nature issued by the president last August when the mine war was in progress in the West Virginia coal fields.

In the West Virginia proclamation, he called on all persons engaged in unlawful and insurrectionary proceedings in the coal strike, to disperse and retire peacefully by a certain date. When the proclamation was disregarded Mr. Harding sent troops into the disrupted area and placed the area under marshall law.

Officials declined to say whether such steps may be taken at this time.

Give No Answer

Chicago, Ill., July 12—No definite reply to the shop men's strike settlement proposal was given Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the labor board by representatives of the railway executives at the noon day conference today. Executives said that they would inform Mr. Hooper of their answer later."

Chairman Hooper said his chief purpose in the meeting of the executives was to arrange a conference between them and B. M. Jewell, leader of the striking shop men and indicated that the attitude of the executives was disappointing.

Mob Attacks Workers

Dennison, Texas, July 12—One man was shot and 47 alleged strike breakers and four deputy United States marshalls were attacked by a mob of about twenty men believed to be strikers and sympathizers while being marched from the Union depot to the M., K. & T. shops here early this morning. Sixteen men were kidnapped and taken to the Red river bottom, where they were flogged.

Others escaped and four men claiming to be victims of the mob were found walking along the railroad track at Collett, Oklahoma, this morning. Those who escaped the mob were shipped out of Dennison. The situation is quiet here at noon.

Hold Secret Meetings

Chicago, Ill., July 12—Settlement of the rail strike seemed nearer today when it was disclosed that Secret conferences had been held between Ben. W. Hooper, chairman of the United States railroad labor board and leaders of the six striking shop crafts.

No definite conclusions were reached as a result of the secret peace meetings, but disclosure of the conferences which were described as more personal than official, raised hope in the railroad world.

President Harding's personal intervention in the strike through his proclamation calling for protection of transportation of the mails, was accepted as bearing much significance and all eyes were turned toward

FIND LOCAL MAN DEAD IN CAR ON LONELY STREET

M. H. VANDENBROOK FOUND VICTIM OF HEART TROUBLE THIS MORNING AFTER LONG SEARCH

Matt H. District Attorney F. W. Calkins was immediately called to the scene, but in view of the fact that the death was very obviously a natural one, no official investigation is planned.

EDUCATORS FAVOR GOVERNMENT HELP

SUPT. E. G. DOUDNA TELLS OF SENTIMENT AT NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION CONVENTION FOR DEMOCRACY OF EDUCATION

Democracy in education was the keynote of the National Educational Association Convention held in Boston according to City Supt. of Schools E. G. Doudna who has just returned from the convention. The problem which the 10,000 educators who were present at the big convention were most interested in was uniformity of education in all the states of the union and equality of opportunity for education to all people in the states, Mr. Doudna states.

Favor Educator in Cabinet

The general sentiment of the convention was for a representative for education in the president's cabinet and an appropriation for all states of the union from the Federal government, Mr. Doudna said. The most feasible plan is to prepare appropriations much the same as federal aid roads are maintained and leave the expenditures up to the states individually the government allowing each state in proportion to the state budgets for education. They opposed federal interference with the states in their education methods other than to insist that uniformity of educational methods be adopted by all states.

Shows Need in South

Mr. Doudna pointed out that there is a great need for federal educational aid in the south, where southern states are now expending large sums for education. Especially in Louisiana, it was shown at the convention that 25 per cent of the adult populace are illiterates and federal aid is needed there if any where.

Much good will come of the work of the convention for democracy in education, Mr. Doudna predicted.

Take Steps To Prevent Sale Of Liquor At Camps

Madison, Wis.—Rigid enforcement of the prohibition laws by officers and enlisted men during the encampments of the Wisconsin national guard is ordered by Adjutant General Orlando Holway in his instructions sent to guard units today.

"The field camps now approaching in which some 7,000 young Wisconsin men will be assembled are bound to attract the peddling bootlegger, irresponsible, without care for the vile rawness of his poisonous product, eager only for his own profit," Adjutant General Holway said. "The guard, assembled as such, may not with honor disobey or desregard the law nor afford the spectacle of soldiers crazed and inflamed by poisonous drink.

"To lessen and if possible, to avoid any such unhappy contingency," the adjutant general added, "no intoxicating liquor will be brought to camp, except such as is provided by the state surgeon for medicinal use in the camp hospital. Officers in command of organizations are especially charged to this end with thorough inspection before entrainment for camp, and all officers, whether or not in charge of units, will themselves be governed by the same rule.

Seek Organization Of "Safe Drivers" Clubs Thru State

Milwaukee, Wis.—Organization of Safe Drivers clubs throughout Wisconsin is hoped for during the next year, according to Charles M. Williamson, head of the Safety division, Milwaukee Association of Commerce.

The Safe Drivers Club of Milwaukee has completed a membership campaign and now has enrolled throughout the county 10,281 drivers, who are in favor of "sane driving."

During the past year the club has worked hard in putting into effect a number of traffic regulations which will decrease accidents, the outstanding of which is the Arterial highway system, which compels al ldrivers to come to a dead stop before turning on a boulevard or main street. Through cooperation of the suburbs the system has been extended beyond the city limits and it is possible for cars to come in from the outskirts of South Milwaukee to the heart of the city on a clear street.

Among other things the club has aided in the establishment of danger signs at sharp curves and has made an effort to have all shrubbery removed near dangerous turns.

The club works with the State Highway commission for the advancement of safe driving and has helped to reduce the number of deaths caused by automobiles during the past year.

Secure Elks' Hall For Rural Carriers Meeting

The local boy scouts have volunteered their cooperation in handling the convention, and will serve as guards and messengers.

Labor Board Chairman Ben Hooper Disappointed In Executives' Attitude.

(By Associated Press)

Washington, July 12—That President Harding's proclamation directing all persons to refrain from all interferences with lawful efforts to maintain interstate commerce and carrying of the United States mails stood today as the government's last word in the railway shop men's strike. Indications were from other quarters that should the proclamation be not heeded strong action was contemplated.

Mails Must Move

The presidential proclamation issued late last night after the president and his cabinet had spent the day studying the question, was generally interpreted today as a warning to both the striking shop men and railroads that mails must move and interstate commerce be maintained.

The interpretation had as its basis the proclamation of somewhat similar nature issued by the president last August when the mine war was in progress in the West Virginia coal fields.

In the West Virginia proclamation, he called on all persons engaged in unlawful and insurrectionary proceedings in the coal strike, to disperse and retire peacefully by a certain date. When the proclamation was disregarded Mr. Harding sent troops into the disrupted area and placed the area under marshall law.

Officials declined to say whether such steps may be taken at this time.

Give No Answer

Chicago, Ill., July 12—No definite reply to the shop men's strike settlement proposal was given Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the labor board by representatives of the railway executives at the noon day conference today. Executives said that they would inform Mr. Hooper of their answer later."

Chairman Hooper said his chief purpose in the meeting of the executives was to arrange a conference between them and B. M. Jewell, leader of the striking shop men and indicated that the attitude of the executives was disappointing.

Mob Attacks Workers

Dennison, Texas, July 12—One man was shot and 47 alleged strike breakers and four deputy United States marshalls were attacked by a mob of several hundred men believed to be strikers and sympathizers while being marched from the Union depot to the M. K. & T. shops here early this morning. Sixteen men were kidnapped and taken to the Red river bottom where they were flogged.

Others escaped and four men claiming to be victims of the mob were found walking along the railroad track at Collert, Oklahoma, this morning. Those who escaped the mob were shipped out of Dennison. The situation was quiet here at noon.

Hold Secret Meetings

Chicago, Ill., July 12—Settlement of the rail strike seemed nearer today when it was disclosed that Secret conferences had been held between Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the United States railroad labor board and leaders of the six striking shop crafts.

No definite conclusions were reached as a result of the secret peace meetings, but disclosure of the conferences which were described as more personal than official, raised hope in the railroad world.

President Harding's personal intervention in the strike through his proclamation calling for protection of transportation of the mails, was accepted as bearing much significance and all eyes were turned toward

NO MORE WAR

The anniversary of the beginning of the Great war will be celebrated this year in a way that should attract attention. In 10 nations of Europe and in 14 of the states of this country there will be demonstrations having for their central idea, "No More War." In Washington a 10-foot banner thus inscribed, will be displayed. In Detroit, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Washington and Boston exercises are planned to voice the sentiment.

The movement began in France and in Germany last year and this year it will be taken up in England, Holland, Sweden, Australia, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary, Portugal and Switzerland also. The plan is to unite all agencies of peace, regardless of their methods, and give expression to the universal sentiment, "No More War."

The influence of the world-wide suggestion ought to be powerful. It is like a man who has been sick saying to himself, "I'm going to keep well; I'm going to keep well!" The mere repetition of the words might keep his mind in a favorable state. But the part of wisdom would suggest also that he pay attention to the causes which gave him trouble before.

So with the war-sick world. It will be good to keep saying, "No More War," but it will be better to create popular opinion against those who preach the building up of armed force, the forming of threatening alliances, the fomentation of international hatreds and the fostering of international suspicion. If those who want no more war can deprive individuals and groups of the possibility of making profit out of war they will do a big thing in the way of making their No War demonstrations effective.

COMMERCIALIZED SPORTS

Colleges and universities throughout the country took action a year ago looking to the protection of athletics from what they regarded as "an increasing tendency to commercialization." In their student bodies they had men whose membership therein was due principally to their ability to excel in college sports. Many institutions promptly dismissed. Such men whenever records showed they were not conforming to required standards of scholarship.

Following the colleges athletic again to exclude from membership what are known as "professionals." They undertook to make such associations purely amateur and to this end formulated restrictions and regulations which would place competition in every way above even suspicion of professionalism. The statement was made early in the year that athletic associations in all the large cities had succeeded in their purpose to a degree that was most gratifying to their members.

Recently there have appeared on the sporting pages of metropolitan newspapers, and in magazines devoted to athletics and sports, articles strongly arguing that the national game of baseball be freed from the commercialization to which it has been subjected. The writers of these articles support their arguments by many facts pertaining to the commercialization of the game, all of which tend to prove that "money making is antagonistic to nationalization in that it creates suspicion at least that results of games are predetermined and championships are passed around."

They point to the fact that patronage of what are known as "leagues" is decreasing about in proportion as support of amateur associations is increasing. They clinch their argument with the statement that "the net result of high-priced hired players is the gradual yet unmistakable decadence of the national game."

"Why does a chicken always cross the road?" asks a motorist. Because there's a mirror on the other side, probably.

In the opinion of the French Academy of Science Mars is easy to talk to. That may be because Mars hasn't a telephone yet.

The leaders who call the railroad strikes are still in better standing with the public than the brakemen who call the stations.

An abandoned oil well in Oklahoma has spouted $83,000 worth of the product for an investor—and, probably 35,000 new stock companies.

BADGER GRADING PRAISED IN EAST

DEPARTMENT OF MARKETS, IN REPLY TO MORGAN ALLEGATIONS, CITES OPINIONS ON CHEESE

Madison, Wis.—A reply was given today by the state department of markets to the claim of Attorney General William J. Morgan, that the cheese industry of Wisconsin was being imperiled by grading regulations, by publication of a letter from the U. S. Department of Agriculture asserting that cheese from this state is meeting with favor in Eastern markets because of its standards.

The letter made public by the department of markets, which was written by K. C. Potts, in charge of the Division of Dairy and Poultry Products, of the U. S. department, says in part:

"Last week I spent one day at each of the markets Boston, New York and Philadelphia. While at these markets, I took occasion to inquire of our representatives regarding the effect of the Wisconsin grade, on American cheese on the marketing of cheese in these markets.

Quality Important

"In the eastern markets, quality is becoming more and more an important factor with the trade, and high quality goods, such as your Wisconsin 'Fancy' cheese, are readily sold at a premium over No. 1. It should be of interest to you to know that the Wisconsin system of grading cheese has been received with so much favor in the Eastern markets, and should result in Wisconsin producers obtaining premiums for their highest quality cheese.

"Our representative on the New York market stated that the wholesale cheese receivers are free in their praise of the Wisconsin grading and, while occasionally they take slight exception to the grading that, on the whole, they consider it in line with the quality of the cheese. The dealers state that since the grading of Wisconsin cheese has become effective, the quality of Wisconsin cheese has materially improved and shipments are more uniform in quality than formerly."

CHIROPRACTIC ADJUSTMENTS

RESULTS in handling the sick and suffering have made me what I am today. Without results I would be a dismal failure. But with unlimited confidence in the ONE BIG IDEA that nerve pressure at a certain place in the spine is the CAUSE of most sickness, I am able to restore health to fully 90 per cent of the people who come to my office.

A large portion of the cases I get are men and women who have tried every other method of healing before coming to me. If Chiropractic will reach 90 per cent of these chronic cases, what do you suppose it will do for acute cases? My answer is "they would never become chronic."

Perhaps you think that I am boosting just a little, but when a Chiropractor has absolute confidence that he can deliver health to the sick, he has a right to boost and let others know the truth. I want to tell you there is nothing equal to confidence—pure unadulterated 100 per cent confidence. Think of the perfect satisfaction that comes to the Chiropractor when he knows, and knows that he knows, and then having put that knowledge to the acid test with gratifying results, he knows that he can do it again and again.

As a Doctor of Chiropractic I know that 90 per cent of the suffering in this community is unnecessary. I know that the CAUSE of this suffering can be removed with Chiropractic adjustments. I have implicit confidence in my ability to do this because o fthe RESULTS I am daily getting with all kinds of diseased conditions. Would that every sick person in this town could be prevailed upon to investigate what Chiropractic will do to restore them to health and happiness.

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS — A Hard Day of Pleasure — BY ALLMAN

by Rafael Sabatini

Coming later into that upstairs room that was common to all the troupe, Andre-Louis found M. Binet talking loudly and vehemently. As he entered Binet broke off short, and wheeled to face him.

"I await your explanations of the disgraceful scene you provoked tonigh."

"Disgraceful? Is it disgraceful that the public should applaud me?"

"The public? The rabble, you mean. After the play tonight M. de La Tour d'Azyr came to me, and spoke to me in the severest terms about your scandaious outburst. I was forced to apologize and . . ."

"The more fool you," said Andre-Louis. "A man who respected himself would have shown that gentleman the door." M. Binet's face began to empurple.

"And I say further," Andre-Louis went on, "that a man who respects himself, on quite other grounds, would have been only too glad to have seized this pretext to show M. de La Tour d'Azyr the door."

"What do you mean by that?" There was a rumble of thunder in the question.

Andre-Louis' eyes swept round the company assembled at the supper-table. "Where is Climene?" he asked, sharply.

Leandre leapt up to answer him, white in the face, tense and quivering with evcitement.

"She left the theater in the Marquis de La Tour d'Azyr's carriage immediately after the performance.

We heard him offer to drive her to this inn."

"That would be an hour ago—rather more. And she has not yet arrived?"

"Not yet."

"Ah!" Andre-Louis sat down, and poured himself wine. There was an oppressive silence in the room. Platers were pushed toward him. He helped himself calmly to food, and ate in silence apparently with a good appetite.

At long length came a rumble of wheels below and a rattle of halting hoofs. Then voices, the high, trilling laugh of Climene floating upwards. Andre-Louis went on eating unconcernedly.

She came in, a leading lady taking the stage, head high, chin thrust forward, eyes dancing with laughter; she expressed triumph and arrogance. Her cheeks were flushed, and there was some disorder in the mass of nut-brown hair that crowned her head. In her left hand she carried an enormous bouquet of white camellias. On its middle finger a diamond of great price drew almost at once by its effulgence the eyes of all.

Her father sprang to meet her with an unusual display of paternal tenderness. "At last, my child!"

He conducted her to the tble. She sank into a chair, a little wearily, a little nervelessly, but the smile did not leave her face, not even when she glanced across at Scaramouche.

Andre-Louis, however, still went on eating stolidly, without so much as a look in her direction. Gradually the company came to realize that just as surely as a scene was brooding, just so surely would there be no scene as long as they remained. Within two minutes none remained in the room but M. Binet, his daughter, and Andre-Louis. And then, at last, Andre-Louis set down knife and fork, washed his throat with a draught of Burgundy, and sat back in his chair to consider Climene.

"I trust," said he, "that you had a pleasant ride, mademoiselle."

"Most pleasant, monsieur." Impudently she strove to emulate his coolness, but did not completely succeed.

"And not unprofitable, if I may judge that jewel at this distance: worth a formidable sum even to so wealthy a nobleman as M. de La Tour d'Azyr. Would it be impertinent in one who has some notion of becoming your husband, to ask you, mademoiselle, what you have given him in return?"

M. Binet uttered a gross laugh, a queer mixture of cynicism and contempt.

"I have given nothing," said Climene, indignantly.

"Ah! Then the jewel is in the nature of a payment in advance."

"My God, man, you're not decent!" M. Binet protested.

"Decent?" Andre-Louis' smouldering eyes turned to discharge upon M. Binet such a fulmination of contempt that the old scoundrel shifted uncomfortably in his chair. "Did you mention decency, Binet? Almost you make me lose my temper." Slowly his glance returned to Climene. "Mademoiselle," he said, slowly, "I desire you purely in your own interests to consider whither you are going."

"I am well able to consider for myself, and to decide without advice from you, monsieur."

"And now you've got your answer," chuckled Binet. "I hope you like it."

Andre-Louis had paled a little; there was incredulity in his great sombre eyes as they continued steadily to regard her. Of M. Binet he took no notice.

"I bow to your choice, mademoiselle. I pray that you may not regret it."

"Regret it?" cried M. Binet. He was laughing, relieved to see his daughter at last rid of this suitor of whom he had never approved, if we except those few hours when he really believed him to be an eccentric of distinction. "And what shall she regret? That she accepted the protection of a nobleman so powerful and wealthy that as a mere trinket he gives her a jewel worth as much as an actress earns in a year at the Comedie Francaise?"

Andre-Louis looked at him in silence for a long moment. Then he laughed again. "Oh, you are fantastic," he said. "You are not real." He turned on his heel and strode to the door.

Andre-Louis turned, his hand upon the door-handle. "No," he said, "I was mistaken. You are not fantastic. You are just vile—both of you." And he went out.

CHAPTER X

Twenty-four hours with La Binet had been more than enough for the fastidious and discerning taste of M. de La Tour d'Azyr. He looked back upon the episode with nausea—marveling at himself that until yesterday he should have found her so desirable, and cursing himself that for the sake of that ephemeral and worthless gratification he should seriously have imperiled his chances of winning Mademoiselle de Kercadiou to wife.

The Chevailer de Chabrillane sat opposite to him in the enormous traveling berline. As they were rattling over the cobbles of Nantes' streets, he remembered a promise to La Binet to witness her performance that night in "The Faithless Lover." He had led the mercenary little strumpet—it was thus he thought of her at present, and with some justice—to expect favors from him in addition to the lavish awards which already he had made her. The baggage had almost sought to drive a bargain with him as to her future. It became necessary now to come to an understanding, since he was compelled to choose between his trivial passion for her—a passion quenched already—and his deep, almost spiritual devotion to Mademoiselle de Kercadiou.

He pulled the cord. The carriage rolled to a standstill; a footman appeared at the door.

"To the Theatre Feydau," said he.

The great traveling carriage drew up at the lighted portals of the Feydau, and M. le Marquis stepped out. He entered the theatre with Chabrillane, all unconsciously to deliver himself into the hands of Andre-Louis.

In the interval after the second act, Andre-Louis sought the dressing-room shared by Polichinelle and Rhodomont. Polichinelle was in the act of changing.

"I shouldn't trouble to change," he said. "The piece isn't likely to go beyond my opening scene of the next act with Leandre."

He was gone. Rhodomont stared at Polichinelle. Polichinelle stared at Rhodomont.

As they approached the wings a roar of applause met them coming from the audience. It was applause and something else: applause on an unusual note. As it faded away they heard the voice of Scaramouche ringing clear as a bell:

"And so you see, my dear M. Leandre, that when you speak of the Third Esate, it is necessary to be more explicit. What precisely is the Third Esate?"

"Nothing," said Leandre.

There was a gasp from the audience, audible in the wings, and then swiftly followed Scaramouche's next question:

"True. Alas! But what should it be?"

"Everything," said Leandre.

The audience roared its acclamations.

"True again," said Scaramouche. "And what is more, that is what it will be. Do you doubt it?"

"I hope it," said the schooled Leandre."

"You may believe it," said Scaramouche, and again the acclamations rolled into thunder.

MILITARY STUNTS FEATURE REUNION

SPECIAL BAND AND CAVALRY MANEUVERS WILL BE AMONG ATTRACTIONS AT 32ND DIVISION GATHERING

Madison, Wis.—A military band of 200 pieces will feature the spectacular field day events on Tuesday, Aug. 29, when 1,000 ex-service men, members of the fighting 32nd division, assemble for their third annual reunion in the capital city.

Col. J. H. Lewis, a retired cavalry officer, who has staged many maneuvers, will put on a program of cavalry stunts, the like of which has not been seen in either Michigan or Wisconsin, and the championship LaCrosse teams, coming all the way from Winnipeg, Canada, will stage a fast game that will tend to stimulate interest in this popular Canadian game which is gaining headway in the states. Other features, including a tug-of-war between Michigan and Wisconsin members of the 32nd division, will add interest and zest to the afternoon program which is designed as the official welcome to this fighting division.

Tickets Ready Now

An opportunity will be given visitors to Madison during the reunion to witness this spectacular program and reservations for tickets, at $2 each, should be made to the Red Arrow club, Madison, Wis., now, as the advance sale is on. The Citizen's committee has reserved a block of seats for the delegates and other tickets are now on sale. This advance sale has been made necessary because of the demand for reservations and in order that the committee may know whether to provide for 20,000 or 25,000 seats. Heretofore, when Madison has had a big foot ball game, the city has been that not enough seats were available, and to avoid this condition, advance seat sale has been opened early.

Every indication points to a big attendance at the reunion. Rooms, in addition to hotel accommodations, have been secured all over the city and University of Wisconsin facilities have been placed at the disposal of the committees.

NO MORE WAR

The anniversary of the beginning of the Great war will be celebrated this year in a way that should attract attention. In 10 nations of Europe and in 14 of the states of this country there will be demonstrations having for their central idea, "No More War." In Washington a 10-foot banner thus inscribed, will be displayed. In Detroit, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Washington and Boston exercises are planned to voice the sentiment.

The movement began in France and in Germany last year and this year it will be taken up in England, Holland, Sweden, Australia, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary, Portugal and Switzerland also. The plan is to unite all agencies of peace, regardless of their methods, and give expression to the universal sentiment, "No More War."

The influence of the world-wide suggestion ought to be powerful. It is like a man who has been sick saying to himself, "I'm going to keep well; I'm going to keep well!" The mere repetition of the words might keep his mind in a favorable state. But the part of wisdom would suggest also that he pay attention to the causes which gave him trouble before.

So with the war-sick world. It will be good to keep saying, "No More War," but it will be better to create popular opinion against those who preach the building up of armed force, the forming of threatening alliances, the fomentation of international hatreds and the fostering of international suspicion. If those who want no more war can deprive individuals and groups of the possibility of making profit out of war they will do a big thing in the way of making their No War demonstrations effective.

COMMERCIALIZED SPORTS

Colleges and universities throughout the country took action a year ago looking to the protection of athletics from what they regarded as "an increasing tendency to commercialization." In their student bodies they had men whose membership therein was due principally to their ability to excel in college sports. Many institutions promptly dismissed. Such men whenever records showed they were not conforming to required standards of scholarship.

Following the colleges athletic asgan to exclude from membership what are known as "professionals." They undertook to make such associations purely amateur and to this end formulated restrictions and regulations which would place competition in every way above even suspicion of professionalism. The statement was made early in the year that athletic associations in all the large cities had succeeded in their purpose to a degree that was most gratifying to their members.

Recently there have appeared on the sporting pages of metropolitan newspapers, and in magazines devoted to athletics and sports, articles strongly arguing that the national game of baseball be freed from the commercialization to which it has been subjected. The writers of these articles support their arguments by many facts pertaining to the commercialization of the game, all of which tend to prove that "money making is antagonistic to nationalization in that it creates suspicion at least that results of games are predetermined and championships are passed around."

They point to the fact that patronage of what are known as "leagues" is decreasing about in proportion as support of amateur associations is increasing. They clinch their argument with the statement that "the net result of high-priced hired players is the gradual yet unmistakable decadence of the national game."

"Why does a chicken always cross the road?" asks a motorist. Because, there's a mirror on the other side, probably.

BADGER GRADING PRAISED IN EAST

DEPARTMENT OF MARKETS, IN REPLY TO MORGAN ALLEGATIONS, CITES OPINIONS ON CHEESE

Madison, Wis.—A reply was given today by the state department of markets to the claim of Attorney General William J. Morgan, that the cheese industry of Wisconsin was being imperiled by grading regulations, by publication of a letter from the U. S. Department of Agriculture asserting that cheese from this state is meeting with favor in Eastern markets because of its standards.

The letter made public by the department of markets, which was written by R. C. Potts, in charge of the Division of Dairy and Poultry Products, of the U. S. department, says in part:

"Last week I spent one day at each of the markets Boston, New York and Philadelphia. While at these markets, I took occasion to inquire of our representatives regarding the effect of the Wisconsin grades on American cheese on the marketing of cheese in these markets.

Quality Important

"In the eastern markets, quality is becoming more and more an important factor with the trade, and high quality goods, such as your Wisconsin "Fancy" cheese, are readily sold at a premium over No. 1. It should be of interest to you to know that the Wisconsin system of grading cheese has been received with so much favor in the Eastern markets, and should result in Wisconsin producers obtaining premiums for their highest quality cheese.

"Our representative on the New York market stated that the wholesale cheese receivers are free in their praise of the Wisconsin grading and, while occasionally they take slight exception to the grading that, on the whole, they consider it in line with the quality of the cheese. The dealers state that since the grading of Wisconsin cheese has become effective, the quality of Wisconsin cheese has materially improved and shipments are more uniform in quality than formerly."

Your Health
Begins When You Start Taking
CHIROPRACTIC ADJUSTMENTS

RESULTS in handling the sick and suffering have made me what I am today. Without results I would be a dismal failure. But with unlimited confidence in the ONE BIG IDEA that nerve pressure at a certain place in the spine is the CAUSE of most sickness, I am able to restore health to fully 90 per cent of the people who come to my office.

A large portion of the cases I get are men and women who have tried every other method of healing before coming to me. If Chiropractic will reach 90 per cent of these chronic cases, what do you suppose it will do for acute cases? My answer is "they would never become chronic."

Perhaps you think that I am boasting just a little, but when a Chiropractor has absolute confidence that he can deliver health to the sick, he has a right to boast and let others know the truth. I want to tell you there is nothing equal to confidence—pure unadulterated 100 per cent confidence. Think of the perfect satisfaction that comes to the Chiropractor when he knows, and knows that he knows, and then having put that knowledge to the acid test with gratifying results, he knows that he can do it again and again.

As a Doctor of Chiropractic I know that 90 per cent of the suffering in this community is unnecessary. I know that the CAUSE of this suffering can be removed with Chiropractic adjustments. I have implicit confidence in my ability to do this because o fthe RESULTS I am daily getting with all kinds of diseased conditions. Would that every sick person in this town could be prevailed upon to investigate what Chiropractic will do to restore them to health and happiness.

Consultation about your case is without cost or obligation.

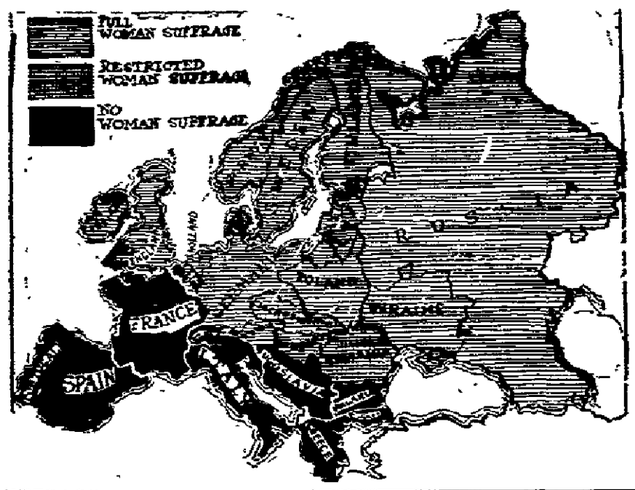
Costs Money to Keep Mines Dry.

One of the big expenses of a coal mine is the continual pumping of water to keep it dry. In the average anthracite mine, 18 tons of water are hoisted from the mine for every ton of coal mined, and in some mines it runs up to 27 tons.

World War Results In Rapid Spread Of Suffrage In Europe



SUFFRAGE MAP OF EUROPE

(By NEA Service)

Paris—The World War and the sweeping political changes in its wake have changed Europe from a continent where woman was denied the ballot to a predominantly woman-suffrage continent.

Throughout northern Europe women enjoy equal rights with men. In the south they still lack voting power but they're putting up a strong fight, backed in some cases by leading statesmen.

Here's how the fight stands today:

FRANCE—Suffrage question up in Parliament with Viviani, Briand and other statesmen favoring it.

GREAT BRITAIN—Equality of the sexes has been voted by the House of Commons. Two women members are now sitting—Lady Astor and Mrs. Margaret Wintringham. Suffrage is restricted to women of 30 or more.

SWEDEN—Women voted for the first time last fall. Five women elected deputies in the Riksdag.

NORWAY—Women obtained all citizenship rights and even obtained a seat in the cabinet in 1916.

DENMARK—Women are voters. Eleven in the Riksdag.

RUSSIA—Soviets declare women on an absolute equality with the men.

FINLAND—Women are voters. As far back as 1917 19 were elected to the national parliament.

ESTHONIA, LITHUANIA and LETTONIA—Women have equal rights.

NONE INDISPENSABLE ARLISS FILM MORAL

"Do Your Best and Set a Fast Pace", Says Star in "The Ruling Passion"

The query of just how indispensable a man is, has been touched upon in the newest George Arliss photoplay, "The Ruling Passion," which comes to the Palace theatre today and tomorrow.

Every now and then, one of the big points of life crop up in the George Arliss photoplays, and in each instance the distinguished actor makes a strong play on that point, because motion pictures are, in a measure, the best medium for driving home a thought.

In "The Ruling Passion," the role assigned to Mr. Arliss is that of "James Alden," a middle-aged man, out by no means too old to work. He has been ordered by his physician to retire from business, and consents only after pleas by members of his family. A meeting of the board of directors of the company has been called, to consider and to accept his resignation, and in the general leave-taking, Alden smilingly assures his associates:

"No man is indispensible—except to his own family."

There is no note if sadness intended in this. It is a thought that is acceptable because of the truth behind it, and the man, in any walk of life, who believes, even after a whole lifetime spent in any line of human endeavor, that he cannot be replaced, is held to be in error.

The moral is: Do your best and set a fast pace for your successor!

Coming later into that upstairs room that was common to all the troupe, Andre-Louis found M. Binet talking loudly and vehémently. As he entered Binet broke off short, and wheeled to face him.

"I await your explanations of the disgraceful scene you provoked tonigh."

"Disgraceful? Is it disgraceful that the public should applaud me?"

"The public? The rabble, you mean. After the play tonight M. de La Tour d'Azyr came to me, and spoke to me in the severest terms about your scandalous outburst. I was forced to apologize and . . ."

"The more fool you," said Andre-Louis. "A man who respected himself would have shown that gentleman the door." M. Binet's face began to empurple.

"And I say further," Andre-Louis went on, "that a man who respects himself, on quite other grounds, would have been only too glad to have seized this pretext to show M. de La Tour d'Azyr the door."

"What do you mean by that?" There was a rumble of thunder in the question.

Andre-Louis' eyes swept round the company assembled at the supper-table. Where is Climene?" he asked, sharply.

Leandre leapt up to answer him, white in the face, tense and quivering with excitement.

"She left the theater in the Marquis de La Tour d'Azyr's carriage immediately after the performance.

We heard him offer to drive her to this inn."

"That would be an hour ago—rather more. And she has not yet arrived?"

"Not yet."

"Ah!" Andre-Louis sat down, and poured himself wine. There was an oppressive silence in the room. Platers were pushed toward him. He helped himself calmly to food, and ate in silence apparently with a good appetite.

At long length came a rumble of wheels below and a rattle of halting hoofs. Then voices, the high, trilling laugh of Climene floating upwards. Andre-Louis went on eating unconcernedly.

She came in, a leading lady taking the stage, head high, chin thrust forward, eyes dancing with laughter; she expressed triumph and arrogance. Her cheeks were flushed, and there was some disorder in the mass of nut-brown hair that crowned her head. In her left hand she carried an enormous bouquet of white camellias. On its middle finger a diamond of great price drew almost at once by its effulgence the eyes of all.

Her father sprang to meet her with an unusual display of paternal tenderness. "At last, my child!"

He conducted her to the tble. She sank into a chair, a little wearily, a little nervelessly, but the smile did not leave her face, not even when she glanced across at Scaramouche.

Andre-Louis, however, still went on eating stolidly, without so much as a look in her direction. Gradually the company came to realize that just as surely as a scene was brooding, just so surely would there be no scene as long as they remained. Within two minutes none remained in the room but M. Binet, his daughter, and Andre-Louis. And then, at last, Andre-Louis set down knife and fork, washed his throat with a draught of Burgundy, and sat back in his chair to consider Climene.

"I trust," said he, "that you had a pleasant ride, mademoiselle."

"Most pleasant, monsieur." Impudently she strove to emulate his coolness, but did not completely succeed.

"And not unprofitable, if I may judge that jewel at this distance; worth a formidable sum even to so wealthy a nobleman as M. de La Tour d'Azyr. Would it be impertinent in one who has some notion of becoming your husband, to ask you, mademoiselle, what you have given him in return?"

M. Binet uttered a gross laugh, a queer mixture of cynicism and contempt.

"I have given nothing," said Climene, indignantly.

"Ah! Then the jewel is in the nature of a payment in advance."

"My God, man, you're not decent!" M. Binet protested.

"Decent?" Andre-Louis' smouldering eyes turned to discharge upon M. Binet such a fulmination of contempt that the old scoundrel shifted uncomfortably in his chair. "Did you mention decency, Binet? Almost you make me lose my temper." Slowly his glance returned to Climene. "Mademoiselle," he said, slowly, "I desire you purely in your own interests to consider whither you are going."

"I am well able to consider for myself, and to decide without advice from you, monsieur."

"And now you've got your answer," chuckled Binet. "I hope you like it."

Andre-Louis had paled a little; there was incredulity in his great sombre eyes as they continued steadily to regard her. Of M. Binet he took no notice.

"I bow to your choice, mademoiselle. I pray that you may not regret it."

"Regret it?" cried M. Binet. He was laughing, relieved to see his daughter at last rid of this suitor of whom he had never approved, if we except those few hours when he really believed him to be an eccentric of distinction. "And what shall she regret? That she accepted the protection of a nobleman so powerful and wealthy that as a mere trinket he gives her a jewel worth as much as an actress earns in a year at the Comedie Francaise?"

Andre-Louis looked at him in silence for a long moment. Then he laughed again. "Oh, you are fantastic," he said. "You are not real." He turned on his heel and strode to the door.

Andre-Louis turned, his hand upon the door-handle. "No," he said, "I was mistaken. You are not fantastic. You are just vile—both of you." And he went out.

CHAPTER X

Twenty-four hours with La Binet had been more than enough for the fastidious and discerning taste of M. de La Tour d'Azyr. He looked back upon the episode with nausea—marveling at himself that until yesterday he should have found her so desirable, and cursing himself that for the sake of that ephemeral and worthless gratification he should seriously have imperiled his chances of winning Mademoiselle de Kercadiou to wife.

The Chevailer de Chabrillane sat opposite to him in the enormous traveling berline. As they were rattling over the cobbles of Nantes' streets, he remembered a promise to La Binet to witness her performance that night in "The Faithless Lover." He had led the mercenary little strumpet—it was thus he thought of her at present, and with some justice—to expect favors from him in addition to the lavish awards which already he had made her. The baggage had almost sought to drive a bargain with him as to her future. It became necessary now to come to an understanding, since he was compelled to choose between his trivial passion for her—a passion quenched already—and his deep, almost spiritual devotion to Mademoiselle de Kercadiou.

He pulled the cord. The carriage rolled to a standstill; a footman appeared at the door.

"To the Theatre Feydau," said he.

The great traveling carriage drew up at the lighted porthls of the Feydau, and M. le Marquis stepped out. He entered the theatre with Chabrillane, all unconsciously to deliver himself into the hands of Andre-Louis.

In the interval after the second act, Andre-Louis sought the dressing-room shared by Polichinelle and Rhodomont. Polichinelle was in the act of changing.

"I shouldn't trouble to change," he said. "The piece isn't likely to go beyond my opening scene of the next act with Leandre."

He was gone. Rhodomont stared at Polichinelle. Polichinelle stared at Rhodomont.

As they approached the wings a roar of applause met them coming from the audience. It was applause and something else; applause on an unusual note. As it faded away they heard the voice of Scaramouche ringing clear as a bell:

"And so you see, my dear M. Leandre, that when you speak of the Third Esate, it is necessary to be more explicit. What precisely is the Third Esate?"

"Nothing," said Leandre.

There was a gasp from the audience, audible in the wings, and then swiftly followed Scaramouche's next question:

"True. Alas! But what should it be?"

"Everything," said Leandre.

The audience roared its acclamations.

"True again," said Scaramouche. "And what is more, that is what it will be. Do you doubt it?"

"I hope it," said the schooled Leandre."

"You may believe it," said Scaramouche, and again the acclamations rolled into thunder.

MILITARY STUNTS FEATURE REUNION

SPECIAL BAND AND CAVALRY MANEUVERS WILL BE AMONG ATTRACTIONS AT 32ND DIVISION GATHERING

Madison, Wis.—A military band of 200 pieces will feature the spectacular field day events on Tuesday, Aug. 29, when 1,000 ex-service men, members of the fighting 32nd division, assemble for their third annual reunion in the capital city.

Col. J. H. Lewis, a retired cavalry officer, who has staged many maneuvers, will put on a program of cavalry stunts, the like of which has not been seen in either Michigan or Wisconsin, and the championship LaCrosse teams, coming all the way from Winnipeg, Canada, will stage a fast game that will tend to stimulate interest in this popular Canadian game which is gaining headway in the states. Other features, including a tug-of-war between Michigan and Wisconsin members of the 32nd division, will add interest and zest to the afternoon program which is designed as the official welcome to this fighting division.

Tickets Ready Now

An opportunity will be given visitors to Madison during the reunion to witness this spectacular program and reservations for tickets, at $2 each, should be made to the Red Arrow club, Madison, Wis., now, as the advance sale is on. The Citizen's committee has reserved a block of seats for the delegates and other tickets are now on sale. This advance sale has been made necessary because of the demand for reservations and in order that the committee may know whether to provide for 20,000 or 25,000 seats. Heretofore, when Madison has had a big foot ball game, the cry has been that not enough seats were available, and to avoid this condition, advance seat sale has been opened early.

Every indication points to a big attendance at the reunion. Rooms, in addition to hotel accommodations, have been secured all over the city and University of Wisconsin facilities have been placed at the disposal of the committees.

COAL COMPANIES TO TUNNEL OHIO

BARRIER BETWEEN OHIO AND WEST VIRGINIA WILL BE DONE AWAY WITH TO SAVE FREIGHT CHARGES

Bellaire, Ohio—The Ohio River no longer is to be a barrier between coal mining operations in Ohio and West Virginia.

Three big coal companies opening up the Pittsburgh district in the extreme southeastern part of Belmont county, Ohio, and the contiguous district on the West Virginia side already have developments well under way or outlined to tunnel under the Ohio river and deliver their product at the surface, either on the Ohio or West Virginia side as the route of shipment contemplates.

Save 45 Cents

An advantage of 45 cents per ton in shipping charges will accrue by using the tunnel—a saving of 20 cents per ton on zone rates and 25 cents per ton bridge charges. If coal mined on the Ohio side is destined for shipment east, it will be taken through the river tunnel and loaded on the West Virginia side, thus saving the bridge charge also the zone differential. Likewise, coal mined on the West Virginia side, but destined for points west, will be taken through the tunnels to the Ohio side, again saving the 45 cents differential.

Is Joint Enterprise

Companies preparing to tunnel the Ohio River are the Cleveland and Western Coal company, Hanna Coal company and the George M. Jones Coal company. One of the companies already has its shaft down on the West Virginia side and the other companies are beginning work on the propositions. The tunnels will be 120 feet under the bed of the river through the regular coal seam.

It is expected that within five years this new district will be producing coal at the rate of 50,000 tons per day, making it one of the most productive districts in the West Virginia-Ohio coal region.

Four to Chicago

And "pipe this last one, kids" four grand champion individuals are going to the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago next fall. Tickets are to be awarded to the champion calf club boy or girl, the champion pig club boy or girl, the champion aby beef boy or girl, and to the champion sheep club boy or girl. And if you want a whole week in Chicago with sight seeing excursions" "everything" just remember!

That State Leader Bewick will base his awards next fall on Home Achievements 50% and on State Fair Achievements 50%. So "watch your step."

And then 71 "best boys" in Wisconsin are going to the State Fair.

"The best club boy in each county between the ages of 15 and 19 years inclusive will get a free trip to the State Fair for ushering in the grandstand afternoons and evenings."

Offer Scholarships

Also, if you want to go to Madison and see the University, State Capitol and other scenic spots, there are 6 fifteen-dollar short course scholarships to be given to the 6 highest county champions. These scholarships have been contributed by the Milwaukee Association of Commerce.

And Bewick is already making plans for a good time next year at the boys' and girls' short course.

BUSINESS MAN ENDS 20 YEAR SEARCH

"For twenty long years," began Robert A. Sturmer, proprietor of the Badger Dairy Lunch Co., 339 Meade St., Appleton, Wis., "I suffered from stomach trouble and nervousness. I tried dozens of remedies and treatments of all sorts, but all I took Kozak did for me was [illegible] results. Today I feel [illegible] better and I give all the credit to Kozak. Instead of lying awake nights I feel much better. My appetite is improved and in fact my general health and feelings are very good, caused by Kozak. [illegible] I have at last found a medicine that has true merit. I feel [illegible] to recommend Kozak to anyone suffering from stomach [illegible] palpitation of the heart, constipation and sluggish system. I got the above relief from taking only one bottle."

Plan Big Conference

Fresh disorders at scattered points while troops patrolled trouble centers, arrangement for a conference today by the "Big Four" train service brotherhoods and an announcement by B. M. Jewell, head of the shop crafts that conferences were planned with representatives of 21 northwestern roads, were among other important developments in the rail strike.

Additional injunctions restraining strikers from interfering with railway operations were granted to other roads. New appeals for troops were made to the governors of Mississippi, Tennessee and Texas, while Governor Boyle of Nevada was asked by the Union Pacific for state intervention in the strike at Las Vegas.

Disorders occurred at Chicago, Milwaukee, Sayre, Pa., Orrville, O., Denison, Texas, while at Roodhouse, Ill., Bert Dickson, a roundhouse foreman for the Chicago & Alton, said to be a nephew of W. G. Bierd, president of the road, was tarred and feathered by a masked band.

The situation at Bloomington, Ill., remained tense with strikers holding the yards and shops, with frequent shootings and a general hostile attitude, among strikers and sympathizers, kept the national guardsmen in constant vigilance. Meanwhile city and county authorities were attempting to establish civil action.

Washington, July 12—With continued reports of interferences with mail trains by railroad strikers reaching the postoffice department in the past twenty-four hours, President Harding has issued a proclamation directing "all persons to refrain from all interference in the lawful efforts to maintain interstate transportation and carrying of the United States mails."

Drawn up for the rail strike situation with particular reference to reports of interferences by strikers with train operations, having been discussed at length at yesterday's cabinet meeting, the presidential proclamation invited the cooperation of all public authorities, city and municipal, and the "aid of all good citizens" to uphold the laws and to "facilitate those operations in safety which were essential to the life and liberty and security of property and our common public welfare."

"The peaceful settlement of controversies between shop crafts employes and carriers in accordance with the law and due respect for the established agencies of such settlements, are essential to the security and well being of our people," the proclamation stated, and added that men who chose to work under terms of the labor board's decision, which led to the walk out, "have the same indisputable right to work that others have to decline to work."

Prior to issuance of the proclamation, Postmaster General Work late yesterday directed all postmasters to report to their local superintendents of the railway mail service any interferences with the movement of the mails.

He also gave instructions that additional postal inspectors be sent to points where railroads have reported interference with train operations and ordered them to make prompt report to Washington.

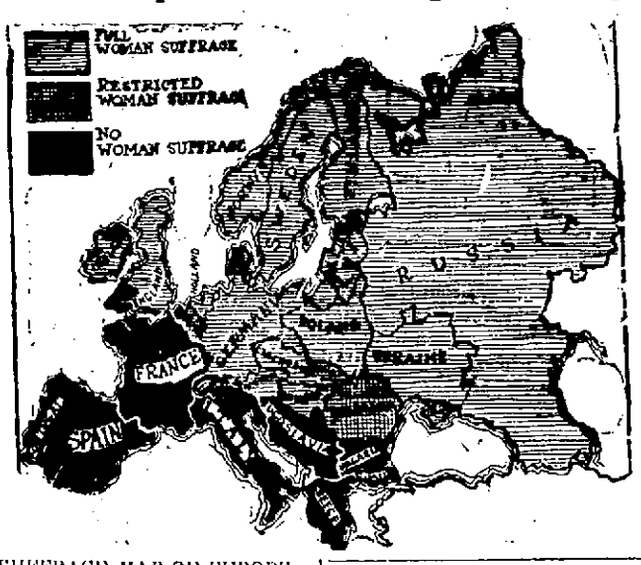
Costs Money to Keep Mines Dry.

One of the big expenses of a coal mine is the continual pumping of water to keep it dry. In the average anthracite mine, 18 tons of water are hoisted from the mine for every ton of coal mined, and in some mines it runs up to 27 tons.

World War Results In Rapid Spread Of Suffrage In Europe



SUFFRAGE MAP OF EUROPE

(By NEA Service)

Paris—The World War and the sweeping political changes in its wake have changed Europe from a continent where woman was denied the ballot to a predominantly woman-suffrage continent.

Throughout northern Europe women enjoy equal rights with men. In the south they still lack voting power but they're putting up a strong fight, backed in some cases by leading statesmen.

Here's how the fight stands today:

FRANCE—Suffrage question up in Parliament with Viviani, Briand and other statesmen favoring it.

GREAT BRITAIN—Equality of the sexes has been voted by the House of Commons. Two women members are now sitting—Lady Astor and Mrs. Margaret Wintringham. Suffrage is restricted to women of 30 or more.

SWEDEN—Women voted for the first time last fall. Five women elected deputies in the Riksdag.

NORWAY—Women obtained all citizenship rights and even obtained a seat in the cabinet in 1916.

DENMARK—Women are voters. Eleven in the Riksdag.

RUSSIA—Soviets declare women on an absolute equality with the men.

FINLAND—Women are voters. As far back as 1917 19 were elected to the national parliament.

ESTHONIA, LITHUANIA and LETTONIA—Women have equal rights.

UKRAINE—Women have equal rights. Twelve are deputies in the national assembly.

GERMANY—After the revolution women were given the vote and nearly 30 are in the Reichstag.

AUSTRIA—The republic gave electoral rights to women. They are eligible for the national assembly and municipal councils.

HUNGARY—Women have suffrage and have elected one deputy to Parliament.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA—The Czech republic gave the women all the rights men enjoyed. Thirteen women deputies and three senators elected.

POLAND—Women have the vote and have chosen eight women deputies.

HOLLAND—Women have the vote. Two are members of Parliament.

LUXEMBURG—Women have the vote and have chosen one woman as a member of the national assembly.

BELGIUM—Women are limited to eligibility and vote for burgomasters and other municipal jobs.

RUMANIA—The Senate has accorded women suffrage in municipal affairs.

SWITZERLAND—Laws are largely decided by referendum and the men have not yet accorded full suffrage to women.

NONE INDISPENSABLE ARLISS FILM MORAL

"Do Your Best and Set a Fast Pace", Says Star in "The Ruling Passion"

The query of just how indispensable a man is, has been touched upon in the newest George Arliss photoplay, "The Ruling Passion," which comes to the Palace theatre today and tomorrow.

Every now and then, one of the big points of life crop up in the George Arliss photoplays, and in each instance the distinguished actor makes a strong play on that point, because motion pictures are, in a measure, the best medium for driving home a thought.

In "The Ruling Passion," the role assigned to Mr. Arliss is that of "James Alden," a middle-aged man, out by no means too old to work. He has been ordered by his physician to retire from business, and consents only after pleas by members of his family. A meeting of the board of directors of the company has been called, to consider and to accept his resignation, and in the general leave-taking, Alden smilingly assures his associates:

"No man is indispensible—except to his own family."

There is no note if sadness intended in this. It is a thought that is acceptable because of the truth behind it, and the man, in any walk of life, who believes, even after a whole lifetime spent in any line of human endeavor, that he cannot be replaced, is held to be in error.

The moral is: Do your best and set a fast pace for your successor!

AWARD HONORS TO LOCAL SCOUTS AT MEETING TUESDAY.

MANY PROMOTIONS AND MERIT BADGES; COURT RECOMMENDS ROGERS GARRISON FOR HEROISM MEDAL

The Court of Honor of Wisconsin Rapids Council, Boy Scouts of America, met last evening at Scout headquarters and awarded many ranks and promotions, including first and second class scout badges, merit badges, life scout, star scout, and a recommendation to the national Court of Honor that an honor medal be awarded Rogers Garrison for heroism in saving a life at risk of his own.

All but one member of the Court, which was in session at the semi-annual meeting of the Scout Council a month ago, attended, with guests being Commissioner Guy Nash, Padre Wm. Bouma, Rev. Noel Reed, F. H. Eberhardt, F. R. Gooding and Executive E. H. Justice.

Many Merit Badges

Frederick Dobson, Jacobson and Philleo Nash, all of Wisconsin Rapids Troop Two, were advanced to Second Class Scouts. Lawrence Bennett of Wisconsin Rapids Troop One and Leslie Barton of Biron Troop One won the coveted distinction of the First Class badge. Wisconsin Rapids Troop Two had nine first class scouts up for merit badges, to whom the following awards were made. Thomas Nash, Cycling; F. Garrison Nash, Athletics, First Aid to Animals, and Scholarship; Ray Sampson, Cycling, Athletics, and First Aid; Van Wake, Swimming, Signaling and Firemanship; Karl Roenius, Swimming; George LaBour Jr. Scholarship; Bernard Brazeau, Scholarship; John Redford, Public Health, Personal Health, and First Aid to Animals; Ulysses Uehling, Firemanship.

F. Garrison Nash having won merit badges for Athletics, Pioneering, Personal Health, Public Health and First Aid was awarded the Life Scout badge, and having five merit badges aside from those named obtained also the Star Scout badge, next to Eagle Scout the highest distinction in scouting. Ray Sampson with the five badges named above was made Life Scout, but lacked one merit badge of the necessary number to get the Star Scout.

Recommend Heroism Medal

The Court of Honor examined Second Class Scout Rogers Garrison of Troop Two, who noticed a man much beyond his own size and weight drowning in the swimming pool, and, regardless of the danger to himself rescued him, and other witnesses of the event and after considering the evidence recommended to the National Court of Honor that a Gold Honor Medal be awarded him in recognition of unusual heroism in the actual saving of life at risk of his own.

Troop 2 Sets Record

Troop Two enjoyed the unusual distinction of presenting thirteen of their twenty-two scouts to the Court of Honor and of being awarded, aside from the recommendation to the National Court of Honor for Honor Badge for Garrison for saving life, one Star Scout, two Life Scouts, seventeen Merit Badges in ten different subjects and three second class scouts. Every one of their nine first class scouts obtained one or more merit badges each of which constitutes a unique achievement in scouting so far as the information of local scout officials go. These nine scouts have won in all sixty-three merit badges and include one Eagle, one Star and one Life scout.

Wausau Golf Champion Urges Attention To Boys

That the development of boys in the game of golf is the greatest service a country club can perform was the message delivered to the local Rotary club today by Robert Evans, champion of the Wausau county club, who met Jack Stump, Wausau professional, in a match on the local links this afternoon. Mr. Evans and Mr. Stump were guests of the Wisconsin Rapids Rotary club at the weekly luncheon this noon.

Mr. Evans said that in Chicago where attention to the development of youthful golfers has been given for some time, there are now scores of young men scarcely past 21 years, who are already developing into players of championship calibre. Milwaukee, he said, was the only city in Wisconsin where any real attention has been given to the boys. He advocated introducing boys to the game at about 10 years of age.

PURE BRED SIRES WOULD DOUBLE MILK PRODUCTION

CITE EXAMPLE OF DENMARK, WHERE AVERAGE PRODUCTION IS TWICE AMERICAN MARK

Chicago—The milk and butter fat at present produced by the 23,000,000 dairy cows of the United States could be produced by 12,000,000 if only pure bred sires were at the head of each herd, according to a survey made public today by the National Institute of Progressive Farming.

In Denmark, which has the most fully developed dairy industry in the world, the productiveness of cows is double that of the United States, it was stated.

Have Few Pure Breds

The world's champion milk and butter fat cows are in this country, but less than three-quarters of a million of the 23,000,000 producing dairy cows are pure bred, the institute said. This accounts for the fact that our average production is only one-half that of Denmark and Holland.

An illustration of the profit in the use of pure bred sires comes from Iowa State College, according to the survey. In this instance the first cross breeding of native cows with pure bred Holstein-Friesians showed an increase of 83 per cent in milk and 58 percent in butter fat. The second generation cows, which were three quarters pure bred, showed an increase of 180 percent in milk and 128 percent in butter fat over the production of the original native cows. If this process were followed in all herds, the survey estimates that production would be about 40 pounds of butter per capita instead of 17 a year as at present, 8 or 9 pounds of cheese instead of 3.8, and 9 pints of milk daily instead of one.

Progress is Slow

The survey expressed the opinion that American farmers are progressing slowly but surely toward this standard, just as they are progressing in other ways, that is in the rotation and diversification of crops, greater use of silos, and the employment of tractors and other farm power machinery which saves time to be devoted to the greater care required by higher grades of live stock.

COAL COMPANIES TO TUNNEL OHIO

BARRIER BETWEEN OHIO AND WEST VIRGINIA WILL BE DONE AWAY WITH TO SAVE FREIGHT CHARGES

Bellaire, Ohio—The Ohio River no longer is to be a barrier between coal mining operations in Ohio and West Virginia.

Three big coal companies opening up the Powhatan district in the extreme southeastern part of Belmont county, Ohio, and the contigous district on the West Virginia side already have developments well under way or outlined to tunnel under the Ohio river and deliver their product at the surface, either on the Ohio or West Virginia side as the route of shipment contemplates.

Save 45 Cents

An advantage of 45 cents per ton in shipping charges will accrue by using the tunnels—a saving of 20 cents per ton on zone rates and 25 cents per ton bridge charges. If coal mined on the Ohio side is destined for shipment east, it will be taken through the river tunnel and loaded on the West Virginia side, thus saving the bridge charge also the zone differential. Likewise, coal mined on the West Virginia side, but destined for points west, will be taken through the tunnels to the Ohio side, again saving the 45 cents differential.

Is Joint Edterprise

Companies preparing to tunnel the Ohio River are the Cleveland and Western Coal company, Maher Collieries company and the George M. Jones Coal company. One of the companies already has its shaft down on the West Virginia side and the other companies are beginning work on the propositions. The tunnels will be 120 feet under the bed of the river through the regular coal seam.

It is expected that within five years this new district will be producing coal at the rate of 50,000 tons per day, making it one of the most important districts in the West Virginia-Ohio soft coal region.

The heart of the new district is about six miles below Moundsville, W. Va. On the Ohio side it is known as the Powhatan district and on the West Virginia side as the Cheasaps district.

I took medicines and treatments of all kinds but not until I took Kozak did I secure any actual results. Today I feel 100 per cent better and I give all the credit to Kozak. Instead of lying awake nights I sleep much better now. My appetite is improved and in fact my general health and feelings have been greatly aided by Kozak, which convinces me that I have at last found a medicine that has true merit. I certainly do recommend Kozak for those suffering from stomach trouble, palpitation of the heart, nervousness and rundown system. I got the above relief from taking only one bottle."

Plan Big Conference

Fresh disorders at scattered points while troops patrolled trouble centers, arrangement for a conference today by the "Big Four" train service brotherhoods and an announcement by B. M. Jewell, head of the shop crafts that conferences were planned with representatives of 21 northwestern roads, were among other important developments in the rail strike.

Additional injunctions restraining strikers from interfering with railway operations were granted to other roads. New appeals for troops were made to the governors of Mississippi, Tennessee and Texas, while Governor Boyle of Nevada was asked by the Union Pacific for state intervention in the strike at Las Vegas.

Disorders occurred at Chicago, Milwaukee, Sayre, Pa., Orrville, O., Denison, Texas, while at Roodhouse, Ill., Bert Dickson, a roundhouse foreman for the Chicago & Alton, said to be a nephew of W. G. Bierd, president of the road, was tarred and feathered by a massed band.

The situation at Bloomington, Ill., remained tense with strikers holding the yards and shops, with frequent shootings and a general hostile attitude, among strikers and sympathizers, kept the national guardsmen in constant vigilance. Meanwhile city and county authorities were attempting to establish civil action.

Washington, July 12—With continued reports of interferences with mail trains by railroad strikers reaching the postoffice department in the past twenty-four hours, President Harding has issued a proclamation directing "all persons to refrain from all interference in the lawful efforts to maintain interstate transportation, and carrying of the United States mails."

Drawn up for the rail strike situation with particular reference to reports of interferences by strikers with train operations, having been discussed at length at yesterday's cabinet meeting, the presidential proclamation invited the cooperation of all public authorities, city and municipal, and the "aid of all good citizens" to uphold the laws and to "facilitate those operations in safety which were essential to the life and liberty and security of property and our common public welfare."

"The peaceful settlement of controversies between shop crafts employes and carriers in accordance with the law and due respect for the established agencies of such settlements, are essential to the security and well being of our people," the proclamation stated, and added that men who chose to work under terms of the labor board's decision, which led to the walk out, "have the same indisputable right to work that others have to decline to work."

Prior to issuance of the proclamation, Postmaster General Work late yesterday directed all postmasters to report to their local superintendents of the railway mail service any interferences with the movement of the mails.

He also gave instructions that additional postal inspectors be sent to points where railroads have reported interference with train operations and ordered them to make prompt report to Washington.

AWARD HONORS TO LOCAL SCOUTS AT MEETING TUESDAY.

MANY PROMOTIONS AND MERIT BADGES; COURT RECOMMENDS ROGERS GARRISON FOR HEROISM MEDAL

The Court of Honor of Wisconsin Rapids Council, Boy Scouts of America, met last evening at Scout headquarters and awarded many badges and promotions, including first and second class scout badges, merit badges, life scout, star scout, and a recommendation to the national Court of Honor that an honor medal be awarded Rogers Garrison for heroism in saving a life at risk of his own.

All but one member of the Court, which was enlarged at the semi-annual meeting of the Scout Council a month ago, attended, judges present being Commissioner Guy Nash, Father Wm. Reding, Rev. Noel Breed, F. H. Eberhardt, F. R. Goddard and Executive E. H. Justice.

Many Merit Badges

Tenderfeet Doudna, Jacobson and Philleo Nash, all of Wisconsin Rapids Troop Two, were advanced to Second Class Scouts, Lawrence Bennett of Wisconsin Rapids Troop One and Leslie Barton of Biron Troop One won the coveted distinction of the First Class badge. Wisconsin Rapids Troop Two had nine first class scouts up for merit badges, to whom the following awards were made: Thomas Nash, Cycling; F. Garrison Nash, Athletics, First Aid to Animals, and Scholarship; Ray Sampson, Cycling, Athletics, and First Aid; Van Wake, Swimming, Signaling and Firemanship; Karl Roenius, Swimming; George LaBour Jr. Scholarship; Bernard Brazeau, Scholarship; John Redford, Public Health, Personal Health, and First Aid to Animals; Ulysees Uehling, Firemanship.

F. Garrison Nash having won merit badges for Athletics, Pioneering, Personal Health, Public Health and First Aid was awarded the Life Scout badge, and having five merit badges aside from those named obtained also the Star Scout badge, next to Eagle Scout the highest distinction in scouting. Ray Sampson with the five badges named above was made Life Scout, but lacked one merit badge of the necessary number to get the Star Scout.

Recommend Heroism Medal

The Court of Honor examined Second Class Scout Rogers Garrison of Troop Two, who noticed a man much beyond his own size and weight drowning in the swimming pool, and regardless of the danger to himself rescued him, and other witnesses of the event and after considering the evidence recommended to the National Court of Honor that a Gold Honor Medal be awarded him in recognition of unusual heroism in the actual saving of life at risk of his own.

Troop 2 Sets Record

Troop Two enjoyed the unusual distinction of presenting thirteen of their twenty-two scouts to the Court of Honor and of being awarded, aside from the recommendation to the National Court of Honor for Honor Badge for Garrison for saving life, one Star Scout, two Life Scouts, seventeen Merit Badges in ten different subjects and three second class scouts. Every one of their nine first class scouts obtained one or more merit badges each of which constitutes a unique achievement in scouting so far as the information of local scout officials go. These nine scouts have won in all sixty-three merit badges and include one Eagle, one Star and one Life scout.

Wausau Golf Champion Urges Attention To Boys

That the development of boys in the game of golf is the greatest service a country club can perform, was the message delivered to the local Rotary club today by Robert Evans, champion of the Wausau country club, who met Jack Sturm, Wausau professional, in a match on the local course this afternoon. Mr. Evans and Mr. Sturm were guests of the Wisconsin Rapids Rotary club at the weekly luncheon this noon.

Mr. Evans said that in Chicago, where attention to the development of youthful golfers has been given for some time, there are now dozens of young men scarcely past 21 years, who are already developing into players of championship calibre. Milwaukee, he said was the only city in Wisconsin where any real attention has been given to the boys. He advised introducing boys to the game at about 10 years of age.

PURE BRED SIRES WOULD DOUBLE MILK PRODUCTION

CITE EXAMPLE OF DENMARK, WHERE AVERAGE PRODUCTION IS TWICE AMERICAN MARK

Chicago—The milk and butter fat at present produced by the 23,000,000 dairy cows of the United States could be produced by 12,000,000 if only pure bred sires were at the head of each herd, according to a survey made public today by the National Institute of Progressive Farming.

In Denmark, which has the most highly developed dairy industry in the world, the productiveness of cows is double that of the United States, it was stated.

Have Few Pure Breds

The world's champion milk and butter fat cows are in this country, but less than three-quarters of a million of the 23,000,000 producing dairy cows are pure bred, the institute said. This accounts for the fact that our average production is only one-half that of Denmark and Holland.

An illustration of the profit in the use of pure bred sires comes from Iowa State College, according to the survey. In this instance the first cross breeding of native cows with pure bred Holstein-Friesians showed an increase of 83 per cent in milk and 58 percent in butter fat. The second generation cows, which were three-quarters pure bred, showed an increase of 180 percent in milk and 128 percent in butter fat over the production of the original native cows. If this process were followed in all herds, the survey estimates that production would be about 40 pounds of butter per capita instead of 17 a year as at present, 8 or 9 pounds of cheese instead of 3.8, and 9 pints of milk daily instead of one.

Progress is Slow

The survey expressed the opinion that American farmers are progressing slowly but surely toward this standard, just as they are progressing in other ways, that is in the rotation and diversification of crops, greater use of fertilizer and the employment of tractors and other farm power machinery which saves time to be devoted to the greater care required by higher grades of live stock.
